- 5.3
- Profession/Occupation
 - Ethnicity
 - Religion
 - Language

(4 × 1) (4)

- 5.4
- Religions have all the elements of culture. They provide strong values and beliefs which lead to definite attitudes, norms of behaviour and expectations.
 - Some of the best-known symbols are religious symbols, for example, the cross of Christianity, the six-point star of Judaism (Jewish religion) and the sickle moon and star of Islam.
 - People who belong to the same religious subculture usually share the same values and beliefs. The implication for management is to decide which religious holidays should be officially recognised and which not.
 - In the business world, religious differences could result in communication barriers regarding issues such as religious public holidays, time taken off work to attend a prayer meeting or initiation ceremony, or even regarding issue such as suitable office wear.
